EDUCATIONAL AIMS OF THE PROGRAMME

This course is designed for you to explore and develop skills to meet the needs of the Performing Arts industry. You will gain practical skills and the associated knowledge and expertise to succeed in the sector. As such, the aims of the programme are to:

1. Provide a creative and facilitative environment with advanced knowledge and skills building through which you will develop high-level discipline expertise, particularly acting, singing and dancing, and become proficient in the use of techniques and resources associated with the performing arts industry.
2. Enable you to evaluate defined aspects of musical theatre and of the wider performing arts industry in historical, social, theoretical and professional contexts.
3. Enable you to appreciate, explore, interrogate and challenge current and historic practice through independent and collaborative enquiry, whilst recognising ethical boundaries.
4. Create an environment that enables speculation and innovation grounded in subject knowledge, leading to the generation of new ideas and performances that respond to current performing arts industry needs.
5. Develop your professional practice knowledge, working abilities and confidence to support effective entry into the performing arts industry, particularly as a musical theatre practitioner.
6. Develop a broad technical and creative skill set, and transferable skills, making you adaptable and flexible in order to support effective transition across disciplines and advancement through the performing arts industry.
7. Develop approaches to organisation and communication necessary for effective management of project briefs, and for sustaining a presence in the performing arts industry.
8. Enable your experience of business responsibility, including team working and leadership; and foster your skills of enterprise and entrepreneurship within a performing arts environment.
9. Develop understanding of own strengths and limitations and responsibility for the attainment of skills suited to personal lifelong learning, career development and/or progress to future education, including post-graduate level study.

WHAT IS DISTINCTIVE ABOUT THIS PROGRAMME?

This Staffordshire University BA [Hons] Musical Theatre programme is approved for delivery at LMA and is a distinctive course offering excellent vocational training that stands out from the rest. This unique three year degree course will prepare you to become a successful professional within the performing arts industry.

So what makes the course unique? Developed collaboratively by current industry practitioners and academics, this course takes into account extensive research by the National Skills Academy and Creative and Cultural Skills Council (published in The Performing Arts Blueprint, 2010). It will equip you with the appropriate range of creative and business skills needed to succeed in the highly competitive performing arts industry today and in the future. Learning on this course extends across a range of genres, roles and media; it is both creative and technical, and is supported by the development of professional knowledge, enterprise, networking and communication skills vital to survival in this sector.

Located in the heart of Liverpool in the vibrant theatre district, with outstanding access to transport links, LMA is the start of your successful career. As well as providing excellent, top-quality training in dance, drama and acting, we specialise in fusing all three together by creating amazing shows every year. The shows are performed in theatres across the region and give you the opportunity to perform on stage in professional environments from very early on in the course. You will have the opportunity to be part of three shows per year, because we believe this is the best preparation for our students to become industry professionals.

The course is designed and delivered by highly experienced Musical Theatre practitioners who are well-known and respected in the sector. LMA prides itself on giving students the ultimate musical theatre experience. Yes, you will participate in practical and informative workshops, but these are part of a much wider range of supporting activities that will help you gain confidence and become a rounded Musical Theatre professional.

Your course will provide excellent value for money, featuring high contact hours with your tutors that will help to instil the discipline, training and professional standards and expectations that the industry demands.

Embarking on a course at LMA marks the start of what we hope will be a lifelong love for, and career in, a creative industry which opens doors to the future!

THE STAFFORDSHIRE GRADUATE

This degree in Musical Theatre fulfils the Staffordshire Graduate pledge by drawing on the extensive professional backgrounds of the delivery team and by providing a mature and flexible learning environment with accessible specialist resources reflective of the industry. Continued exposure to practitioners within the performing arts industry gives students access to the calibre of musical theatre performers, creative personnel, technical crew members, directors and agents as expected at drama school, particularly at this level of education and training. Working alongside such practitioners enables students to gain hands-on professional practice; providing valuable networking opportunities that can prove essential within this challenging global industry.

The Staffordshire Graduate represents a set of qualities that the University passionately believes is necessary for success in the 21st century. A Staffordshire Graduate is a reflective and critical learner with a global perspective, prepared to contribute in the world of work. In partnership with Staffordshire University, this course will produce rounded, articulate and highly employable graduates with the skill set, knowledge base and personal attributes very much in line with industry demands. The course addresses the attributes of employability, entrepreneurship and enterprise, with modules developing confidence, team working skills, industry knowledge and continual personal and professional development [PPD]. It provides students with opportunities for industry exposure to creative and technical professionals alongside their study, as well as continued education and training in the correct professional settings with the appropriate hands-on tools.

For the duration of this BA [Hons] Musical Theatre programme, we aim to provide our graduates with discipline expertise. We instil a critical knowledge of the discipline that is underpinned by the experience, research and industry expertise of the academic staff and which strives to reflect the key issues that affect the world in which we live.

This course falls into the creative and cultural industries sector, which comprises a wide range of businesses and companies, many small and individual. Core to the success of these businesses is the ability to work innovatively and with an enterprising and entrepreneurial approach. As part of our commitment to ensuring that graduates demonstrate the necessary professionalism, we expect that students will engage throughout the course with the world of work, and become enterprising and entrepreneurial by nature. This is achieved through practical work, live briefs, industry practice and independent and self-managed projects to develop and refine the transferable skills [and the confidence and proficiencies that such skills endow] that create graduates with the abilities that employers seek, not only in the field of musical theatre but also in wider employment contexts. This means that the skills you develop will have a usefulness outside the acting profession and you will be able to recognise their relevance as valuable life skills which are not subject specific and will support you as you navigate your way through what is likely to be a varied and changing career.

In order to capitalise on the knowledge and understanding that the degree aims to develop, effective communication and an ability to work in teams and with diverse stakeholders are seen as essential attributes of our graduates. The development of communication, presentation and team working skills lie at the heart of this BA [Hons] Musical Theatre programme and are nurtured through practical briefs that require organisation and cooperation to achieve common goals in the context of creative work for different audiences and partners.

Employers also value independence of thought and a creative ability to find solutions. This BA [Hons] Musical Theatre programme enable students to take ownership of their learning – whether individually or in groups. It encourages independence of thought and problem-solving across a spectrum of activities, in the conduct of work-related briefs through modules such as Traditional Performance, Contemporary Performance and Major Theatre Performance.

Some modules within the course have specific focus on work practice, particularly the modules of Understanding the Performing Arts Industry and Industry Investigation, through which students develop an understanding of the current industry environment and employment opportunities. Your Promotional Portfolio module requires students to prepare an appropriate industry facing portfolio, while the Performance Showcase module puts students in direct contact with industry practitioners.

Students will carry out critical reading and writing, for example in modules such as Performance Studies and Advanced Performance Studies, and this will in part inform development in tutorial discussions, presentations to peers, and performances to identified target audiences. These are essential attributes of the critical, reflective and life-long learners that Staffordshire Graduates are expected to become. Throughout each programme, students are expected to demonstrate their understanding through critical reflection and debate; to question different views and perspectives and to use both generic and specialist skills to recognise and resolve problems.

Increasingly those problems are set in a global context, and globalisation and global citizenship are central to the way that creative and cultural industries professionals engage with the world. Students will explore the local, national and international context of their chosen subject genre and consider how current practice has been influenced by national and international trends through the investigation of the work of others. Students will be expected to access information from diverse sources including via the internet and will learn how to use a range of electronic platforms as routes to a global audience.

COURSE SPECIFIC LEARNING OUTCOMES

The course specific learning outcomes below describe what the course will teach you to do. These outcomes are informed by the QAA benchmark statement for the dance, drama and performance sectors and therefore are representative of the attributes and capabilities that employers would expect you to demonstrate once you have achieved your qualification.

Level 6
Knowledge & Understanding [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 4.2, 4.3, 5.7]	Demonstrate a systematic understanding of the key aspects of musical theatre and the performing arts, including acquisition of coherent and detailed knowledge of the industry, informed by both enquiry, and creative and technical practice.
Learning [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 4.2, 4.3, 5.6, 5.7]	Consider critically your own qualities and transferable skills with reference to the evaluation of your own learning, learning ability and the exercising of initiative and personal responsibility. Think critically about the real working environment of the performing arts industry and how you relate to it, demonstrating insights into your own skills in the context of the sector.
Enquiry [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 4.2, 4.3, 5.4, 5.10]	Deploy effective techniques of analysis and enquiry, demonstrating a professional approach to research and information gathering. Evaluate the ethical implications and appropriateness of information within your work and that of others.
Analysis [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 4.2, 4.3, 5.3, 5.4]	Examine and critically evaluate the complex aspects of musical theatre in a range of industry related contexts – theory and practice. Evaluate own abilities and limitations in order to identify personal and professional development needs. Question the effectiveness of creative and technical processes in terms of producing work that meets industry expectations.

Problem Solving [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 5.3, 5.8]	Develop appropriate methods to solve creative and technical problems. Make decisions informed by a systematic understanding of the key aspects of musical theatre performance in a range of industry related contexts. Investigate, engage with and challenge conventional and alternative ways of interpreting and presenting ideas and performance material.
Communication [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 5.8, 5.9, 5.10]	Communicate interpersonally using effective forms of written and oral expression. Analyse information and convey complex or abstract information, ideas, concepts and solutions to both specialist and public audiences.
Application [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 5.2, 5.3, 5.4, 5.6]	Apply, at a professional level, appropriate skills and abilities to act, sing and/or dance in a range of musical theatre industry related contexts and/or mount successful live and recorded performances, including the development of practical, technical and written projects, considering theories and principles.
Reflection [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 5.3, 5.7]	Manage your own learning, exercising initiative and personal responsibility. Demonstrate qualities and transferable skills necessary for employment and present in a professional manner appropriate to entering the performing arts industry.
Working with Others [Dance, Drama and Performance Benchmark Statement 2015: 4.3, 5.2, 5.4, 5.6, 5.8, 5.9]	Develop the communication and interpersonal skills necessary to become a Leader, by heading management and/or creative and/or technical production teams. Motivate and engage team members and peers when working to a common goal, positively supporting the achievement of agreed outcomes.

HOW WILL I BE TAUGHT AND ASSESSED?

Learning and Teaching

Through this course you will learn about the fundamental principles of working in the performing arts sector, and be encouraged to reflect on how this learning supports a sound base of skills and professional practice. The curriculum is designed to enable you to appreciate the scope and complexity of musical theatre in a range of performing arts industry contexts and the professional demands associated with this. You will learn to adopt a mature and informed approach to personal and career development, and to question, discuss and debate professional practice, theoretical premise and areas of social and cultural interest.

Teaching is designed to support this process and includes lectures, practical workshops, auditions, castings, rehearsals, live performances in a variety of locations for different purposes, seminars, project work and directed independent study. All modules will be supported by the Academy's virtual learning environment, which will not only function as a repository for module resources and information but will also encourage and support independent and flexible study and reinforce the inclusive intentions for learning and teaching on this course. The breadth and range of teaching modes is intended to provide a relevant and stimulating learning experience by supporting the development of essential specific and transferable skills [including communication, reflective practice and team working] in addition to critical understanding of key concepts and theories in a framework that maximises opportunities for student success.

This course is highly vocational with links to industry playing an important part throughout, and with several modules making a positive contribution to the development of a professional portfolio suited to a career within the performing arts industry. Additionally, there are specific modules linking directly to industry through live briefs and the opportunity to showcase yourself and your work to an industry panel. Learning on this course will be enhanced by visiting lectures and masterclasses delivered by industry professionals. Recent masterclasses have included Laurence Olivier award winning actress Imelda Staunton, West End star Kerry Ellis and Strictly Come Dancing professional Jasmine Takacs. The course combines independent performance with group performance projects, typically reflecting industry practice. Live and recorded presentation of your work is encouraged throughout the course, allowing for feedback from public audiences as well as from peers and professionals. The opportunity for synergies with other creative areas enables networks to be formed and provides prospects for collaboration.

Alongside the largely practical design of the modules, self-reflective journals and evaluations add ongoing self-assessment and critique in order to monitor and measure progress and identify strategies for future development.

The course is underpinned by theoretical modules. Through these, an appreciation of the mediums of acting, analysis of scripts and other textual sources, and a realisation of stylistic approaches to performance are gained. These act as a basis for theory to be trialled in practice, whilst reinforcing knowledge and understanding. An important feature of the course is the diversity of modules which allows for broad ranging learning opportunities and scope to contextualise trends, expectations, demands and opportunities within with these industries. There are definite opportunities for creative individualism and specialism as the course progresses.

Students on this course will expect, and be expected, to take responsibility for their own learning and development and self-directed study. This is equally relevant to work undertaken when completing individual or collaborative assignments, whether work individually or as part of a team.

Learning and Teaching strategies include:

Work-based practice: Throughout the course you will relate your training to professionally recognised work activities. You may work in one specialism or across performance areas; and in work that may be in actively performing or in associated roles, such as stage management, event planning and directing, or a combination of these and similar activities. The modules are designed to progressively emphasise professional responsibility and actual experience, which will require you to work increasingly independently whilst enhancing your skills. Work-based practice is embedded in the modules throughout this course and is supported through the Academy's performing arts industry links.

Lectures: Formal lectures enable tutors and visiting speakers to impart ideas and information to groups of students, whilst creating the opportunity to stimulate discussions and bring forward areas that students find challenging. Students can be brought together for lectures across courses; this improves group dynamics, encourages appreciation for the interrelationship between disciplines across the wider creative and cultural industries, supports the HE experience and increases networking opportunities.

Seminars: In groups you will be able to express your ideas and discuss your learning experience. Seminars will enable you to focus and discuss in depth subjects arising both from your formal lectures and work-based practice. Communication skills will be applied through presentations, justification and discussion, requiring listening and responding skills as well as expressive ability.

Technical Demonstrations and Masterclasses: You will gain many of your skills through participating in demonstrations and masterclasses delivered by experienced practitioners from within the Academy and also external experts from the field. Health and safety will be an important aspect of this training. You will be expected to keep a record of technical guidance in the form of hand-outs and personal notes; these will serve as useful prompts in the future. Evidence of your experimentation with materials and techniques should also be saved alongside your hand-outs and notes in a Process Journal.

Projects: You will build a repertoire and portfolios of work demonstrating your learning, largely through the undertaking of projects. As you progress through the course the projects will increase in their remit, responsibility and in their work related evidence.

Research: Research is crucial to the success of those working in the industry – to keep abreast of changes, to market to audiences, monitor competition and generate new ideas. Research methods are taught formally, and research workshops are included throughout the programme, enabling you to identify appropriate methods and evaluate findings.

Independent practice: Throughout the course you will be expected to study independently, to inform your activities in timetabled sessions and to enhance your work-based practice. As entrepreneurship is one of the key attributes of Staffordshire Graduate students, you will be expected to plan your learning to become increasingly independent in your approach and forward planning.

Reflective Practice: Throughout the course you will learn how to use frameworks of reflection to consider critically the actions that you have taken and those that you make take in the future in order to improve your progress and achieve goals. Critical reflection will allow you to demonstrate your understanding; to question different theories and viewpoints; to examine your own practice and that of others; to resolve problems and to speculate about the future. Such reflection may take place through discussion with others and through independent practice. A learning journal, which you will keep throughout the course, will be a tool to record your reflective practice in writing.

Tutorials: As you gain experience in the studio and engage with industry practitioners and clients through live briefs, tutorials become an increasingly important part of the learning strategy. Tutorials can help you to reflect upon your progress – either as part of a group or on a one-to-one basis - and are an opportunity to be presented with formative feedback.

Group Critiques: Being able to assimilate new information, draw upon knowledge to discuss and argue points of view, and reflect and respond to others' viewpoints is central to being successful in the workplace. Group critiques allow you to exercise these skills in a safe environment, developing communication techniques that will enhance your future performance.

Study Visits: Widening your knowledge of practitioners, including historic and contemporary subjects and the challenges of different working environments, supports your learning by stimulating and inspiring, as well as creating opportunities for group discussion, networking and bonding.

Teamwork: Understanding the benefits and challenges of working in teams by undertaking projects, including short and long-term activities, will strengthen your workplace skills. Through collaborative work you will learn to appreciate the pros and cons of combining skill sets, and the skills required to communicate and manage independent and team responsibilities.

Progression:

In order to facilitate progression through your preferred route, whether academic or industry based, you will be guided on the management of your learning in order to tailor your experience and ensure a smooth transition.

Assessment

The assessment strategy is designed to both develop and evaluate your knowledge and skills throughout the course. A variety of academically rigorous assessment tasks, activities and formats will be used to suit different learning styles and situations. All the assessments on this course are designed to prepare you for industry practice.

Assessments are designed to be interesting, relevant and contemporary, with the aim of enhancing personal and professional development, while also evaluating performance. Assessments are designed to meet the learning outcomes within each module and the overall pattern of assessment matches the overarching learning outcomes of the full programme.

Summative assessment takes place on completion of a module through methods such as practical work, pitches, presentations, essays, journals, research projects and reports that require you to demonstrate an in-depth and increasingly critical understanding of key theoretical concepts and practical ability. It is provided in the form of a percentage mark at the end of a module, and is accompanied by written feedback from the module tutor to each individual student, relating his/her achievement to the learning outcomes of the module. The percentage mark is linked, within the Undergraduate Modular Framework Regulations, to a set of general assessment criteria which distinguish attainment at particular levels. In the case of collaborative projects where you will be working in teams, peer assessment along with tutors' observation reports will be used to determine your contribution to the production of the final project and to inform overall grading of the module.

Formative Assessment, which is not graded, is carried out in tutorial and critique situations and feedback is usually provided to you orally, or may be in the form of written feedback on draft pieces submitted. Formative assessment is also sometimes produced as the result of peer or self-assessment exercises. All forms of formative assessment offer you the opportunity to consider your work and take steps to improve and respond to external points of view.

Self-assessment through reflection on the grades and feedback is a valuable way of checking your progress and helping you understand the criteria tutors use to measure progress. If you aspire to achieve higher grades you can read the grading statements to understand what you need to be doing in order to improve.

Assessment feedback is provided to you in two main ways: orally, in tutorial and critique situations and in writing, using a "fast feedback form" that indicates performance against the learning outcomes of the module.

Typical assessment activities that you will be graded may consist of one or a combination of the following:

Creative outputs professionally presented in the format required by the brief, including performances both live and to camera, repertoire and showcase material, etc.

A reflective journal, discussing your learning journey throughout the module and utilising appropriate reflective theory and frameworks

An essay, report, case study or project plan, written and illustrated to given guidelines and word counts

Pitches to clients and presentation of ideas using professional techniques, such as a showcase performance, mini-pitch, slide presentation, electronic/printed publicity material

Self-assessment, peer review and studio critiques

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Entry Requirements [including IELTS score]

What qualifications would I need to join this programme?

The entry requirements for the course are normally:

- 120 UCAS point
- Successful portfolio interview
- Related Work experience
- Mature students welcome by participation in practical workshop, interview and pitch

IELTS 6 [no less than 5.5 in any element]

We welcome applications from mature students and students with non-standard academic qualifications, and the interview allows us to counsel such students as to their best options, an interview would identify the best way forward for such students.

Students may be considered for Recognition of Prior Learning on the basis of credit achieved in prior study; work based experience, substantial employment or other experiential learning. This will be considered in accordance with the RPL Handbook. Evaluation is delegated to the Faculty, which is required to assess each application according to the specified procedure. Information about the availability of RPL can be found at:

COURSE SPECIFIC INFORMATION

Employment Context

This course is delivered at Liverpool Media Academy, Hope Street Campus in Liverpool. With eleven traditional theatres in the Merseyside area, four of which are producing theatres, the prospects for Acting and Musical Theatre students locally is positive. A high proportion of the casting is done locally by eight high profile local agents who also cast TV, film and theatre beyond the Merseyside region. The BA [Hons] Musical Theatre programme has been developed taking into account the opportunities across the sector within the region.

The modules are designed to enable you to fulfil the course requirements through your work-based experience. This will include working on the three core disciplines of singing, acting and dance, working across a multitude of genres and styles, in a range of venues for various purposes, and through collaborative and solo work, recognising the varied opportunities available in industry.

Extra Costs

Students on this course are also encouraged to take every opportunity to extend their learning through enrichment activities such as educational visits and networking activities.

This programme incorporates a range of subject relevant educational visits. The cost of these visits is subsidised by LMA but students who wish to take advantage of these are required to make a contribution. This cost would typically add up to no more than £100 per student per year. This enrichment will not be compulsory and will always be discussed well in advance.

Progression to Higher Education

Students choosing to continue down an academic route may wish to progress to a post graduate course; students may apply to appropriate postgraduate courses at Staffordshire University, although they may apply to other institutions as well.

Further information about the course can be found in the Course Handbook and on the University Website. This includes information about learning outcomes at levels below honours, student support, and academic regulations.
